ADG announces opening of Kansas office Expansion comes during Silver Anniversary year in business

DENVER, CO – Airport Development Group, Inc. (ADG) announces the opening of a new office in Lawrence, KS to more efficiently serve its customer base and respond more rapidly to business opportunities nationwide during its silver anniversary year of serving the aviation industry.

ADG, founded in 1984, is dedicated solely to the aviation industry offering planning, design, engineering and marketing/public relations services to all sizes and operations of airports nationwide. The company is headquartered in Denver.

“We’re very pleased to undertake this business expansion during a period of economic unrest,” explained James Sirhall, president and founding principal of ADG. “Our current customers are busy with enhancing their airports, and our national reputation for service and quality is creating new business opportunities across the country.”

Sirhall explained that the Kansas location will compliment its business partnership with the four-state region of Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri and Kansas served by the Federal Aviation Administration’s Central States Regional Office in Kansas City, MO.

Presently, ADG is providing services to the Atwood-Rawlins County Airport, Meade Municipal Airport and Lawrence Municipal Airport. The company has provided services at airports in Emporia, Augusta, McPherson, Garden City, Ulysses and other airfields across Kansas during its 25 years of operation, and is a member of the Kansas Airport Association.

In addition to the new Kansas location, ADG serve the nation’s airports from its headquarters in Denver, CO, and a regional office in Jackson, MS. ADG’s team approach to project management at each airport it serves across the country has resulted in long-standing partnerships and award-winning projects.

“We see a very bright and robust future for airports in the U.S. and each facility we serve brings a unique element to the nation’s aviation industry,” Sirhall explained. “Our company’s sole focus on airport development offers tremendous advantages over traditional multi-disciplinary firms.”
